

Muncie's Progress and the Story of Gas

The discovery of gas on November 11, 1886, was destined to change the sleepy little town of Muncie into a hustling metropolis. Industries flocked to Muncie . . . the population doubled in five years. The momentum carried on through the years to make Muncie one of the leading business centers of the Midwest.

The Central Indiana Gas Company — and its predecessors — have had the privilege of being a part of this thriving and attractive community for more than five decades. We are grateful for that privilege. In the future as in the past, we shall do our part in assisting the community to grow into . . . a still greater Muncie.
