

Gas Company Has Christmas Party

Annual employees' Christmas party of the Indiana Gas and Water company here was held Saturday night at the Elks' Club. A total of 57 employees and their families from Seymour and Brownstown attended.

The meeting opened with a turkey dinner and following the dinner, games were played and 10 prizes were awarded to winners.

Veal to Retire

A feature of the meeting was the recognition of Arthur Veal, of Seymour, who was presented with a platform rocker from the employees and a floor lamp from the company as a compliment to his retirement on December 31. Mr. Veal has been in the gas meter repair business for the past 56 years.

Herman Horstman, of Indianapolis, personnel director for the Public Service Company of Indiana, was a guest at the dinner and spoke to the group, relating old times and experiences he and Mr. Veal had when employed by the same company a number of years ago.

Frank Coyle, district manager, who presided at the dinner, announced that a Christmas bonus of one week's pay will be presented to the employees on December 23.
