

Seen and Heard in Our Neighborhood By Dick Greene

PEOPLE AND THINGS . . . The drilling of an oil well north of Selma has reawakened interest in the subject of oil, judging by the number of requests received for information at the Muncie Public Library. For several months the library has been asked questions about geology, particularly that part which relates to oil bearing rock.

Delaware County once had an "oil boom," which followed the days when natural gas was at its peak. Kemper's history of the county reports that Delaware County in 1904 had 831 producing wells. The bottom dropped out of the oil business
